Dr. Elliot and Valentino Youth and Age Go Together In Romantic Greece Shadrifths Come Home
By Arthur Brisbane

MILLIONS all over the world, as far as moving pictures spread, will learn with deep respect of the death of Rudolph Valentino, who had made so important a place for himself in a great art. A very young man, of intense feeling and extroversion, Valentino held his place, without a rival in his field. Foreign born, with no friends in America to help him, he made his way by hard work, and his talent gave intense pleasure to tens of millions. His life was too short, but it was not wasted.

'CAVE MAN' GOT ROUGH AND LOST HIS FIANCEE

"This 'cave man' business might have been the thing in the end, but it doesn't go with me." True did Miss Mary E. Sherman, 25, of No. 31 Alexander street, Dorchester, express herself today as she returned an unused marriage license to the city registrar's office at City Hall annex.

And with the return of the license ended, temporarily at least, her romance with James T. Coyne, 31, of No. 31 Laurel street, Roxbury. On April 7 the couple filed marriage intentions and on May 3 received the usually coveted license. The groom-to-be gave his occupation as chauffeur. The bride stated she was "at home."

Today Assistant Registrar Jeremiah J. Leary was confronted by an angry girl. "Take this back," she told him, as she pushed the discarded license across the counter. "Was the idea. Is it all right?" queried the registrar.

"Yes, it is all right. He tried a little 'cave man' stuff and it doesn't go with me," came the retort. "But you won't want this back soon?" asked Mr. Leary. "No, sir. If he got that rough before we were married, no talking would be afterwards," was the answer as the girl swept out of the office.

WOMEN TRAMPLED IN CRUSH OF THOUSANDS TO SEE BODY OF RUDY

New York, Aug. 24.—Twelve persons, including women and policemen, were injured today in a wild panic, as a frenzied throng of more than 5,000, which increased steadily hour by hour, surged about the doors of the funeral church on Broadway where the body of Rudolph Valentino lies in state.

Mounted police reserved their horses into the rioting crowd to keep them back from plate glass windows, but the density of the mob repulsed them and the windows crashed, wounding three of the police and two women.

The two women were shoved through the broken show window by the thousands that pushed toward the doors of the funeral church, battling for the first chance to see the dead film hero when the doors would be opened.

One woman's foot was crushed under the hoofs of a mounted policeman's horse. Others fainted and were rescued by attendants of the undertaking rooms, who dragged them inside to save them from being crushed to death.

Traffic was halted and the excited throng spread for three blocks up and down Broadway from Sixty-sixth street. Time and time again the police charged the dense pack of humanity, using strong-arm tactics in a desperate attempt to preserve order, but they were practically helpless.

Amidships were rushed to the scene, but most of them were left clanging uselessly on the outskirts of the mob. (Continued on Page 1, Column 1.)

VALENTINO'S FUNERAL NEXT MONDAY IN N. Y. BURIAL TO BE IN HOLLYWOOD, CAL.

Girls treated the injured in nearby buildings, to which they were forced to gain entrance by side streets.

Two of the injured were Dolie Jacobs of New York city and Samuel Avian of Brooklyn, a movie extra. They were cut by flying glass. The injured policeman were William J. Wallace, George Crowley and Nicholas Revelli, who were both cut by glass and bruised by contact with the milling crowd.

At one time a mamed force of fifty policemen, ten of them mounted, charged into the mob, swinging clubs right and left. Several women were knocked down. Call after call was sent in for additional reserves.

Through it all rain fell, but the ardor of the thousands was undampened.

While the crush was reaching alarming proportions and additional police kept moving toward the scene, word came that Valentino's body will be buried in the United States, probably at Hollywood, in accordance with his brother's wishes.

Published reports hinting that the screen celebrity was placed through from Assistant District Attorney Peora, a statement that would not be unless some plausible proof was presented.

Unbelievable, then was placed on the coffin in the Gold Room of the funeral church at the special order of S. George Ullman, Valentino's friend and business manager, who fears severe penalties and "those that might want to pay him in death as they did in life."

BODY LIES IN STATE
Beginning at 4 o'clock today, the body will lie in state almost continuously until midnight Thursday.

Funeral services, with a solemn high mass of requiem, will take place Monday morning at 11 o'clock at St. Malachi's Church, known as "the actors' church," just off Broadway at 49th street. Interment for the present will be in a receiving vault at Woodlawn Cemetery.

The second woman was Minnie, strain of his last illness. The hair was slicked back in the same fashion that he followed in life, but instead of the handsome beauty in the face of the living "Sheik," they saw the ghastliness of death.

"It is not the same Rudy I knew," said Ullman, in tears.

The funeral on Monday is expected to attract the largest crowd at any of a public character in years. Mayor Walker, Will Hays, Max Baer, Adolph Zukor, Joseph M. Schenck, and Hiram Greene will be honorary pallbearers.

When the public chamber is over, no more appropriate place than Hollywood could be chosen as the last resting place, in the opinion of Ullman and others, who were close to the star.

Decades to have the burial in this country was made by Valentino's brother, Alberto Guglielmi, who is in Paris. When his cabergrun reached this city plane to ship the body in Turin, Italy, for interment beside the screen star's father and mother, were abandoned.

Definite and positive detail that "the great lover of the films" died of arsenic poisoning, inspired by jealousy or revenge, was made by Dr. Harold Mesker, one of the physicians who fought to save his life.

Arrangements for giving the public a chance to view the body, in accordance with Valentino's wishes, were proceeding today.

Funeral offerings came in a steady stream to the funeral chapel today, but few of them bore the name of the screen star.

The women came, claiming to have known the famous star when he was just an ordinary little lad in Italy. One was Mrs. Rose DiCaro, of No. 319 East 113th street, who said that Valentino promised to help her ten-year-old daughter get into the films.

Fickle Fame Weighs Dr. Eliot and Rudy Valentino; Who Wins?

LONDON, Aug. 24 (I.N.S.).—Comparison of the fame of Rudolph Valentino and Dr. C. W. Eliot, late president emeritus of Harvard, was made today in an editorial in the Evening News.

The News said: "Dr. Eliot has been a great force in American life for more than a generation. It is certain that crowds of men and women in Europe know nothing of Dr. Eliot. One may guess that among the millions of his own country he is not greatly known."

"But Rudolph Valentino—there is a name to fill the swelling trumpet of fame. Not America, the whole world mourns that very famous actor of the films."

PHONE CALLS FOUR IN
Telephone calls, too, poured into the chapel, for countless thousands wanted to know definitely when the body would lie in state. According to attendance, the telephone calls came in at the rate of twenty a minute.

Only persons with the proper credentials gained access to the funeral parlors.

Talk was rife of placing a limit on the number of persons who will be permitted to view the body, even though more than two days will probably elapse during the time it lies in state. At least 10,000 will pass through the chapel, in the opinion of Frank Campbell, the owner and manager.

Commenting on rumors that they had been to a "wild party" together the night before Valentino went to the hospital, Miss Marion Berda said today: "We went to Texas Quinn's and had a marvelous time dancing, and when we were there a while Rudolph told me he wanted to get out. We left and he took me home, and then left me."

Valentino himself, of course, was removed from all the furor growing out of his death.

RUDY'S BODY IN 'GOLD ROOM'

By JAMES L. MCGILLICEN, International News Correspondent.

New York, Aug. 24.—The body of Rudolph Valentino, famous screen star, lay in the "Gold Room" in Campbell's Funeral Parlor today—the famous "Funeral Church" on Broadway.

It was in this chamber that Anna Held, Lillian Russell, Oscar Hammerstein, Olive Thomas, Neil Godwin, Vernon Castle and other celebrities of the stage and screen lay in death.

A large crowd gathered in front of the funeral church.

They poured into the spectral glow behind the huge plate glass windows.

Little bobbed-haired flappers, to whom Valentino on the screen represented dashing, idealized romance, passed with bated breath and half-choked sobs.

Typical of the sentiment that he expressed in many ways over the death of Valentino was the crying of a girl to the undertaker to be placed on Valentino's bier.

It was a fourteenth-century crucifix, inlaid with a mosaic of forget-me-nots, she said her uncle, long an intimate friend of Valentino, wanted the crucifix to be placed upon his bier.

The first funeral offering to arrive was a modest spray of gladioli, tied with lavender ribbons, with a card signed Rose Pellman.

Throughout the morning, telephone calls poured into the funeral chapel, most of them from women who asked could they not be permitted to view Valentino in death.

Many other women were in the crowd outside that waited in the hope that doors would be opened.

Among those in the great throng that had assembled was Jean Del Val, fencing master, who taught Valentino the use of the sword which the screen star used to such good advantage in motion pictures.

Del Val was broken-hearted.

Pola Will Come East for Last Look at Rudy

Los Angeles, Aug. 24 (I.N.S.).—Pola Negri will leave for New York next Saturday for a last glimpse of the dead star, she announced today through Charles Elyon, studio official and close friend.

Miss Negri today received a cablegram from Alberto Guglielmi, brother of Valentino, in which he said:

"Dear Pola: Thanks for your sympathetic cable. Sailing tomorrow, Homeric. Only you and I can appreciate our great loss. Hope to see you on my arrival."

"What I hope the final interview can be postponed until I see my brother's body," he said.

"It hardly seems possible that he who a few weeks ago was bursting with youth and vitality as he bade me goodbye when I left New York for Italy, now lies stretched by death."

"I do not feel justified in asking that his body be buried beside those of our father and mother in Turin."

Alberto today received a long cable of condolence from Pola Negri.

He will remain in the United States only long enough to attend Rudolph's estate.

It is not believed that Rudolph left any will and his estate will probably go to Alberto and a sister now in Turin.

Alberto will sail for America on the Homeric tomorrow.

BROTHER HOPES TO SEE RUDY

Paris, Aug. 24 (I.N.S.).—Rudolph Valentino will be buried in the United States after funeral services in a Catholic Church with a solemn high mass, according to the plans of his brother, Alberto Guglielmi.

"My brother would have wanted a Catholic Church funeral with a solemn high mass," said the brother today.

"He owes it to the America he loved and to the Americans who loved him, to be laid at rest in the United States."

America, grief-stricken and with his value broken with emotion, said he hardly hoped that the funeral could await his arrival in the United States.

"What I hope the final interview can be postponed until I see my brother's body," he said.

"It hardly seems possible that he who a few weeks ago was bursting with youth and vitality as he bade me goodbye when I left New York for Italy, now lies stretched by death."

LOYD GEORGE TURNS ATTACK ON CHURCHILL

Defends Self in Plea for
Starving Miners; Calls
Baldwin Meanest Man

London, Aug. 24 (I.N.S.)—Lloyd George had the last word today in the dispute with the Conservative government over the question of suffering and want among the striking miners.

Speaking at Holyhead, the former premier launched a bitter attack on Winston Churchill, who had taken time to take Sunday for the Lloyd George article syndicated in a number of American newspapers, including the Evening American.

The controversy was based on a letter in his article published Sunday in the Evening American, in which he attacked the British government.

It was understood, Churchill said, that the British government should be criticized in the foreign press, where "the public gained no satisfaction from the situation of the British."

"Churchill is shocked that I should criticize his chief—Prime Minister Baldwin—and whom he leads in rather cruel impetuosity around the ring," Lloyd George declared sarcastically. "It is an outlandish article. I should have replied to it."

FOUND MINERS IN WANT.

"Baldwin wrote a letter to America and I replied to America. Where else could I send a reply? That was where the miners were addressed. It was my answer. Baldwin discovered the miners appealing for funds to America to relieve distress in the affected areas. I came to the conclusion, after making an exhaustive investigation, that real distress does exist."

"I called that a mean letter and I said it so again. Why should I get angry? The miners, whatever you may think of the existing dispute, are a gallant race of men. These men who played such a gallant part in the war are not men who would be fraudulent beggars in any land. It is my duty, if it is disgraceful, to be truthful about the situation. I am with the suggestion that they are getting bread under false pretenses."

BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON SOCIETY

North Shore Horticultural Society Holds Annual Show at Manchester

A RIOT OF FLORAL colors and scents fills Horticultural Hall, Manchester, for the annual Midsummer flower show of the North Shore Horticultural Society, of which Mrs. Russell S. Codman is a leader.

TO CALL THE AFFAIR a "flower" show is not, however, strictly the truth, for, alongside the blooms from many North Shore gardens, and adding their primitive colors to the rainbow display, are lovely vegetables of every sort and kind.

FRUITS IN GORGEOUS profusion, from gardens and from houseplants also, are aligned in bright patches, and as the fourth delight for the horticulturist, and more beauty to the eye, there are graceful potted plants blooming their utmost in midsummer richness.

PRIZES GALORE await final decisions by the judges. In addition to the usual schedule on the society's regular list, there are Mrs. Albert C. Burrage's two contributions, a silver cup and a silver medal for the most beautiful collection.

MRS. BURRAGE, ardent horticulturist that she is, is annually a donor of special prizes. Mrs. Albert Burrage, naming the many United States for her particular flower show, has two prizes for a table grouping of named varieties.

OTHERS OFFERING special prizes are Mrs. J. Henry Lawrence, of Cambridge, Mass., Mrs. W. Scott Pitt, Mrs. Keith Merrill, of New York, and Mrs. Leland and Mrs. William H. Moore.

EN PASSANT, Mrs. Lester Leonard was a handsomely arrayed matron at Sullington Hall to see the clever "Sullington Players" put a swash in the amateur dramatic line. Mrs. Leonard wore a glowing gown of rich black picked out in gold tulle, beneath a wrap of velvet colored in fox.

LAST RESPECTS TO SENATOR FERNALD

West Point, Me., Aug. 24 (A.P.)—A crippled boy who rose to political and business eminence in a single night, died yesterday of a stroke of apoplexy at his home in the farmhouse where he was born and in which his family has lived for four generations.

He was United States Senator Earl M. Fernald, who died yesterday after a two weeks' unsuccessful fight against a cardiac vascular disease.

Here he was 83 years old. Fernald, although he was unable to take a step until he was six years old, became conservatively an abiding, a successful business man, a State legislator, Governor and finally in 1914, a United States Senator.

As family and friends gathered to pay their last respects at rites in the little church here, Thursday tributes continued to pour in from those high in State and national life.

His colleagues, Senator Frederick Hale, and Governor Ralph O. Brewster, and many of the many who spoke feelingly of him as a friend and statesman.

Mrs. Fernald and a son and daughter arrived. All were at his bedside when he died.

Frogs Stop Train in Russia! They Tell It There!

Moscow, Aug. 24 (I.N.S.)—A vast number of frogs, migrating across a railroad between Vladivostok and Saryeglinsk in the Crimea, halted a Moscow express for three hours, in a single night. The American Chemical Society, speaking before the House of Representatives today, criticized sentimental propaganda against the use of poison gas and other chemicals.

Means used in warring were in the past have never been determined by humanitarian considerations, he said, urging that this country be prepared for any future war by studying and storing the elements of chemical warfare.

He predicted the next war will begin before the last war has ended, and that mustard gas will be used at the start. He urged that the army be allowed to study and develop this new type of warfare.

The next war, he said, will be a contest in which chemistry and physics will hold the reins of victory, and the nation possess the keenest knowledge of pure and applied science will be best equipped to fight for the right when the time comes.

In the final pressure "crisis," he said, "a nation will use any means available to save its life. Until the spirit of nationalism is killed, and the establishment of a world government is possible, we must make the most of our own strength in inevitable future conflicts, and the chemical warfare possibilities are paramount."

GAS WARFARE DEFENDED BY U.S. EXPERT

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24 (A.P.)—Asserting that chemical warfare will be essential in "imminent future conflicts," Dr. James F. 6 Days in Which to Take Advantage of Our August Sale of Furs

Prices Advance After Sept. 1st

OUR fur buyer has just returned from a trip through the New York fur market. His report of the fur situation should be of interest to every woman who has been debating the question of buying a fur coat now or later.

PRICES have already advanced materially. The coats that we are now featuring at unusually low August sale prices cannot be duplicated at the prices for which we bought them. The wholesale prices have advanced, consequently the retail prices are bound to rise.

AT the present time we would be justified in advancing the prices of fur coats at least 10% to 15%.

IT is a positive assertion that fur prices must advance after September 1st. We make this statement of facts to women who want to save on a purchase of a Fur Coat.

IF you have been intending to buy a fur coat this year, the time is now, before prices advance.

OUR stock offers very fine selection; every coat is backed by our guarantee; the styles are all new and advanced 1926 models. We have larger variety and stocks than ever before.

PARTY TO SUCCEED SISLER AS PILOT OF BROWNS

CHANGE TO TAKE PLACE NEXT YEAR

Browns' Failure and Sisler's Refusal of Playing Offer Responsible for Shakeup

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 24.—George Moriarty, American League umpire, will manage the St. Louis Browns in 1927. George Sisler will quit after the present season, and probably will be traded. He has refused to continue as first baseman, with the same salary he drew as manager. This information comes from most reliable sources, very close to President Phil Ball of the Browns.

The shift will come about because of one of the greatest flops in the history of American League baseball. The Browns were raised as an undoubted permanent fixture in the present campaign. They finished strongly in 24, and with added assistance were puffed by the experts to be one, two, three from the fall of the 75 barrier.

So strong was the belief in the destiny of the team that Owner Ball doubled-decked his park here to accommodate possible attendance crowds. But the Browns were a dismal failure from the start. They never flashed anything, and the new seats in Sportsman's Park have remained empty while the club has been at home.

According to local report, Sisler demanded a chance to remain, and vindicate himself. He had no alibi, for his failure, but believed he could make good, given another year. But his request was turned down, and he was offered a playing contract with no salary.

This he is said to have refused, as the chances are that he will be shifted to Boston, Washington or Detroit. The three clubs being the first basemen who might be considered the equal of Sisler as a player.

George Moriarty has been frequently mentioned as a possible manager for the last few years. He is one of the best of the present day umpires, but has the knowledge of league baseball and the respect of the players that a good manager needs. He was one of the greatest first basemen the American League ever developed, and famous as a batting player.

Sisler was immensely popular in St. Louis until the present season. For years he was the game's leading batter, he could have had the City Hall and the city's fortune and whatever he wanted. When he came back after a year's absence of the game because of eye trouble, he was more a hero than ever.

AN OPEN MID A FIND

UNLESS you have crammed a load of Prince Albert into that favorite pipe of yours, you simply haven't given your pipe a chance to do its stuff. No matter how contented you may think you are, there's a revelation in store for you—in the store where they sell P. A.

On a sporting chance, you might say, thousands of others have tried Prince Albert. They've stayed with it! Because they found P. A. cool as a breeze on a hill-top; sweet as a raise in pay; fragrant as springtime flowers. It didn't bite and it didn't parch.

There's one big reason for all of this. Prince Albert is real, blown-in-the-bottle quality tobacco. No other tobacco is like it—in fragrance, taste and performance in a pipe. That's why P. A. is known as the National Joy Smoke wherever pipes are smoked.

Keep an open mind on this subject. Maybe, after all, there is something to the wonderful tales you've been hearing about jimmy-pipe joy. Maybe? Why, there's no question about it. We know you're been missing the time of your life if you don't know Prince Albert.

PHILLY BRANDS SUNDAY BALL PEACE BREACH

Philadelphia, Aug. 24 (A.P.)—Sunday professional baseball was called a "breach of the peace" and a "disgrace" by the city today in its answer to the Philadelphia American League baseball club's petition for a permanent injunction to prevent police interference with games at the ballpark.

The city's answer, signed by Mayor Kendrick, was filed today in Common Pleas Court where Judge Frank Smith last Saturday granted a temporary injunction, allowing the first Sunday game to be played here the following day between the Athletics and the Chicago White Sox.

He has been boxing at the weight considerably above the junior welterweight limit.

Wills Holds Little Hope for Tunney

bower, I am sure I can 'take it' better than Dempsey. And last, but by no means least, I AM WILLING to take the chance.

"Dempsey has avoided meeting me for more than three years. We have been matched twice for the title and his contract to box in Chicago in September is a matter of record. I am not running away from that contract but Dempsey certainly has not shown himself willing to meet me.

"We talk about a fight for a side bet of $150,000. But my manager, Paddy Mullins, has been trying ever since he made that crack to find out where that money is located. To date we haven't been able to find a trace of it.

"Most of Dempsey's talk about his willingness to meet me and his ability to beat me is baloney. For his proposed fight with Gene Tunney in Philadelphia, I don't believe they ever will meet. Alvin here is much stronger against the match, largely due to his shabby treatment of me.

"I am in perfect physical condition right now," said Wills. "I would like nothing better than to take a whirl at the champion today. I am weighing 215 pounds and never felt more fit in my career. Dempsey is in earnest when he declares that he is willing to step into the ring with me why didn't he take me on instead of Tunney?

"I understand that Tunney has drawn the color line and that he won't give me a chance in case he should win. Well, I am getting used to that kind of shabby treatment, but it rankles just the same.

Tagging All Bases

The Cleveland Indians made a brave entrance into the Yankee Stadium, prepared to give the New Yorkers a few innings of the sort of stuff they've been inflicting on all comers out West. But Urban Shocker, nonchalant Yankee hurler, greeted the visitors with a polite eye, being as scarce with his arm as a quarter in a Scotch church. The Yanks won, 3 to 2.

Scoring four runs in one inning to break a tie, the St. Louis Browns, and scored several more runs in a defensive play on Washington's part provided that interesting inning for the visitors.

EGNE RAPS AT CHAMP AS PUNCHER

Challenger Recalls Willard Battle as Evidence of Boxing King's Weak Walloping

This is the 17th of a series of articles written by Gene Tunney exclusively for the Boston Evening American. The next will appear in Friday's paper.

By GENE TUNNEY

Those who figure Jack Dempsey to beat me base their conclusions upon his "murderous punching ability." And the quietest part of it all, in my opinion, is that the champion is one of the most overrated hitters in ring history.

Dempsey never knocked out a really GOOD MAN in his lifetime. He's bumped over a lot of bums, but when it came to trying out his punch on good fighters—well, great ones, mind you, but merely good ones—he has proved that he has just ordinary power.

Before you take violent exceptions to that statement, study his record—and what does one learn?

A and don't overlook the fact that I am speaking of a 170-pound man.

Gene Tunney, one of the best fighters in his prime—not of the Jack Dempsey of today who has steadily built up a lot in power of punch, accuracy of punch and speed of attack through three years of idleness.

I say Dempsey never was the terrific hitter he is credited with being—and that he's much less so now. So why shouldn't I feel supremely confident of beating him? I don't think that Dempsey, in his best day, could have felled me.

If he couldn't then, how can anyone reckon that he'll do it now? No one ever knocked me off my feet—or even staggered or dazed me. And I guess some of the men I fought could hit me with almost as much power as Dempsey can hit now.

Dempsey dropped Willard seven times and knocked him out the fourth. He hit the big giant at least 100 times—and almost as much punch he threw was from a solid base.

Dempsey smashed him with lefts and rights; he hit him on both sides of the chin; he hit him in the body. All this while Willard was helpless. Yet Dempsey didn't have enough punching power to knock him unconscious.

If Dempsey couldn't, in two full rounds of his most terrific punching, drop a man who was completely helpless—well, what does his "murderous punching" power come to?

WORLD'S CYCLE DERBY

AT REVERE SATURDAY

The Blue Ribbon classic of the paced bike racing game, the World's Cycling Derby, will be run off at the Revere track Saturday night.

Seven cyclists will line up for the start of this year's Derby. As yet Manager Butler has not selected all the riders who are going to compete.

However, he is certain of having Victor Hopkins, Bobby Gramin and George Chapman at the starting line. This is the trio who gave the fans such a thrilling finish in last Saturday's race.

The probabilities are that Charles Varkyn and Frankie Keenan will also compete. Butler is also on the lookout for a seventh rider.

Inside Golf

About the simplest method I know of for starting the clubbed back ward is to shove it off with the left arm.

That is, simply push it back along the ground.

As you do this there will be a tendency to go out to the right with the entire body. This must be restrained somewhat.

The weight can pass easily to the right leg, but watch that you hold the head still, which will restrain your body from swaying.

Design to keep your weight evenly divided.

Shelby Promoters Hit By Experience Lack Kearns Declares

This is the thirty-eighth chapter of Jack Kearns' harrowing story in which he relates the charges of Jack Dempsey. It is the first time that the man who put Jack Dempsey on the pugilist map tells of his experience when he was a prize fighter. Read this story every day in the Boston Evening American.

By JACK KEARNS

I WILL never back down from the stand that the Shelby fight would have been one of the most successful, financially, in the history of the ring if the promoters had been on the level with themselves, to say nothing of their dealings with me.

They bungled when they tried to hide from me the fact that they were going to run out on my last payment of $100,000.

I would have gladly gambled with them. It takes me a long experience to handle an affair like that. If Tex Rickard had dropped into the middle of that Shelby angle, all would have been swift, sweet sailing.

They had made their own bargain and then having isolated that I live up to every detail of it. I myself I was bound they'd not put anything over on me. It was a matter of principle with me no matter whose corns were walked on.

Rickard and I have put over some big fights and we've never had three cross words about it. So why should I let them men pull the wool over my eyes. They weren't telling little Johnny anything I didn't know.

One week before our final payment was due I went to them and said: "Look here fellows. If there is a chance that you're not going to dig up that final payment say so right now." I want to know. If you haven't got the money, I'll take over the show, pull you out of the hole and promote it to you.

Do you suppose they'd stand for that? No sir. Each was so sure of himself that when I suggested that I run the show for the crowd of them, they couldn't see it. To me the whole thing was a mistake.

They couldn't trust themselves so why trust Kearns? The banks had run out on me and I was a bound to be full of frax. He meant well and I thought I'd like to start to keep up appearance. Jim came to me again and said:

"Kearns, they've got me in the middle. They've dumped me. I've lapsed myself, and my friends to the past penny. I'm through. What do you suggest?"

Just what I've been suggesting from the start. That you turn over the promotion of this thing to me and I'll take the experience. I'm not here to kid or skin you. I want mine and you want yours."

Johnson made a final effort to get me to let the money due me but I was not to be won.

It was then I demanded that they turn the show over to me or I would have no fight.

Committees called on me at my hotel at Great Falls. They walked up and down the halls trying out the hammers on their six shooters and talked loud and long about the match on their runs and how they felt they had pulled on his face overworked with lead.

One day when I was in my room and they came in and they told me that they had paid $100,000. Jim Johnson had had his cards on the table. He was the only square shooter among them.

TROJAN GRIDSTERS FACE UNUSUAL OPPORTUNITY

Los Angeles, Aug. 24.—Senior Gridsters on the University of Southern California squad will this year have the second opportunity in their collegiate careers of playing both California and Stanford in one season. In 1925, as freshmen, the thirteen four-year men now on the Trojan team won 10-0 over Stanford and 14-7 over California Freshman.

The 1926 season included only the California game, the Bears winning 7-0. Last Fall only Stanford was met and the Cards were winners, 12-5. This leaves the Southern California senior players with 500 percentage in its both other members of California's "Big Three," and without a variety victory over these opponents.

California and Stanford will be played on succeeding Saturdays.

Carpentier Stalks Delaney for Crack at Boxing Title

Vancouver, B. C., Aug. 24 (A.P.)—Tex O'Rourke, manager of George Carpentier, announced here last night that negotiations have been started for a title bout between the French fighter and Jack Delaney, light heavyweight champion of the world.

"We had been on the trail of Paul Berlenbach," O'Rourke said, "but Delaney succeeded in getting first crack at the title. We have been assured, however, that our challenge will be given consideration and that a championship bout would be arranged."

Fights Last Night

Newark, N. J., (A.P.)—Boxing bouts were held last night at the Garden. The main event was a ten-round bout between Billy Brannan and Billy Brannan. Brannan won by a unanimous decision.

Good-by, "Charleston," Hello, "Valencia"

NEW YORK, Aug. 24 (A.P.).—The "Valencia," described as a "Spanish Fox Trot," was demonstrated to dancing masters today and hailed as the successor of the Charleston.

Mrs. Edna Passapase, Newark dancing teacher, glided over the ballroom of the Waldorf-Astoria in a demonstration of the new dance before delegates to the first joint convention of the International and American National Associations of Masters of Dancing. She said the dance was "without the vulgarity of the Charleston and will appease the modern desire for new steps."

TARIFF CLUB FOR 'COURT'

Paul Smith's, N. Y., Aug. 24 (A.P.).—The matter of American entrance to the permanent court of international justice, President Coolidge expects, will be considered on its merits with the other nations concerned devaluing their positions merely in the light of the Senate reservations to the protocol of adherence. Any suggestion that the question of American entry to the court will be conditioned upon economic concessions, such as tariff reductions, is considered entirely impractical. Unfounded reports in some quarters that the President would refuse to ratify the protocol would make any suggestion that such was the case. It was added the matter of tariff changes would have to be taken up by Congress and the move, in the official opinion here, would be entirely impractical.

By the CONTEST EDITOR.

With the appearance of Contest Picture No. 8, printed today, the thoughts of contestants who hope to be successful in the Greater Movie Season Contest may well turn seriously to the construction of their letters, on "Why I Like the Movies."

Please observe that what is required is not an exhibition in English literature, not a venture in short-story writing, but a sincere, honest, heart-to-heart statement of what the movies mean to you.

Why DO you like the movies? A simple question, assuredly, and one that may very well be answered in simple language.

You find something in the motion picture that you do not find elsewhere. You take something from the pictures that would not come to you otherwise. Tell what it is. Do not say, "But I cannot write. I never wrote anything." How do you know you cannot write, if you have not tried?

ALL GO TO MOVIES.

It may well be that the first Local award in this great contest will go to some little housewife, the mother of one or two small children, who gets her only entertainment from the neighborhood movie end, quite likely, will continue to find it there until her little ones are no longer such a constant care.

No one knows, of course, but it is good to think that such a mother may get the inspiration to sit down and write about what the movies mean to her; and may prove to be a constant care.

The winner of at least a substantial prize. Our dependable champion, the traffic cop who his faithful servant, the inter-carrier; the gallant fireman who spends a part of his day off in the movie house just around the corner.

Any Dollar May Be Worth $650---and Many Times as Much

For Any Dollar May Teach You to Save Its Brothers and Sisters Until You Become a Free Man

Charles E. Rogers had a silver dollar of the issue of 1864. This silver dollar, very rare, is valued by the dealers in antique coins at $650.

Somewhere stole the dollar from Mr. Rogers, and as Mr. Rogers said, "Probably went out and bought a drink with it." It grieves Mr. Rogers to think of that $650 drink. It would grieve the thief, also, probably, if he knew about it; also the bootlegger.

An alarm was sent out, inviting the finder of the valuable dollar to return it and earn a reward.

Many men will examine any silver dollar received in change, hoping to find the date of 1864, which would change the single dollar into six hundred and fifty.

It would be a good thing if the men and women looking out for that one dollar, which is worth six hundred and fifty of its kind, would realize that almost ANY dollar can be worth six hundred and fifty dollars—and a great deal more. They say that John D. Rockefeller has the first dollar that he ever earned still in his pocket or his safe.

That dollar was worth much more than six hundred and fifty. It was worth a good many hundreds of millions of dollars. For the fact that Rockefeller saved it, realized its value and power, is the fact which explains his having saved so many other dollars and piled them up into the great fortune which builds universities, scientific institutions and, at times, controls the Government.

If he had not been able to save that first dollar he would not have saved the others.

Take any dollar out of your pocket, look at it and realize what it means.

In that dollar there is a man's work for a whole day, and there is FOR YOU freedom from slavery and from poverty for at least one day.

KEEP THAT DOLLAR, not in your pocket, but in a savings bank, and add other dollars to it until you have six hundred and fifty—it won't take you long if you once realize that dollars saved mean liberty and freedom from servitude and submission to other men.

When you have your six hundred and fifty dollars you will know that the dollar you first looked at and thought of was worth just as much as that dollar of 1864, and a good deal more.

One dollar or six hundred and fifty dollars mean very little, unless knowledge of the value of money goes with them.

Six hundred and fifty dollars invested intelligently in hand carefully selected—beware of real estate sharks and cheats—or in bonds wisely bought, would mean everything to the millions of men that lack the six hundred and fifty dollars, and that have in its place an indebtedness constantly worrying them.

The possession of money saved is valuable and powerful, not merely because of the force locked up in the money, but because of the state of mind which it produces in the owner.

The man who has money where he knows he can get it has confidence in himself; he is not afraid of the present, or of the future.

And the confidence which he has in himself inspires confidence in others.

His peace of mind enables him to seize an opportunity if it comes, for he is not the slave of the dollar earned each day, does not live in dread of tomorrow's need.

At the same time the money saved prevents the taking of foolish risks, or the throwing away of a good certainty for a doubtful uncertainty.

The man who has saved some money, and WHO HAS IT, knows what saving means, knows what dollars are worth. You will not find that $650 coin, but the dollar that is in your pocket now, or the next dollar that you get, may be more valuable to you than the 1864 coin.

Look at it and think about it. Make up your mind to make that next dollar received the foundation of a great family of dollars OWNED BY YOU. Do that, and some dollar without any special date or history or value will be worth more to you than many coins of 1864; worth more to you than all the coins in the world—for it will give you peace of mind, which is a blessing far beyond the value of money.

Some of the men and women who read this will say to themselves: "There MAY be something in that. I believe I will take just one dollar now and see how many I can add to it."

Why don't YOU say that—and do it?

Why Our Films Please

Sometimes it seems that the most obvious thing is the one most overlooked.

A story was published some time ago of a man who became famous simply because he did or noted the obvious thing. While other people were seeking for subtle and recondite reasons, he selected the obvious one.

Charles Urban said, on sailing from London to New York recently, that the success of American films is simply due to the fact that they are better than those of any other country.

Many deep and political reasons have been given why foreign films are not used so much as ours, but the real reason is that American films are better.

Englishmen and Frenchmen will show films made by China or any other country, provided they are better than American films.

Ignorants Abroad

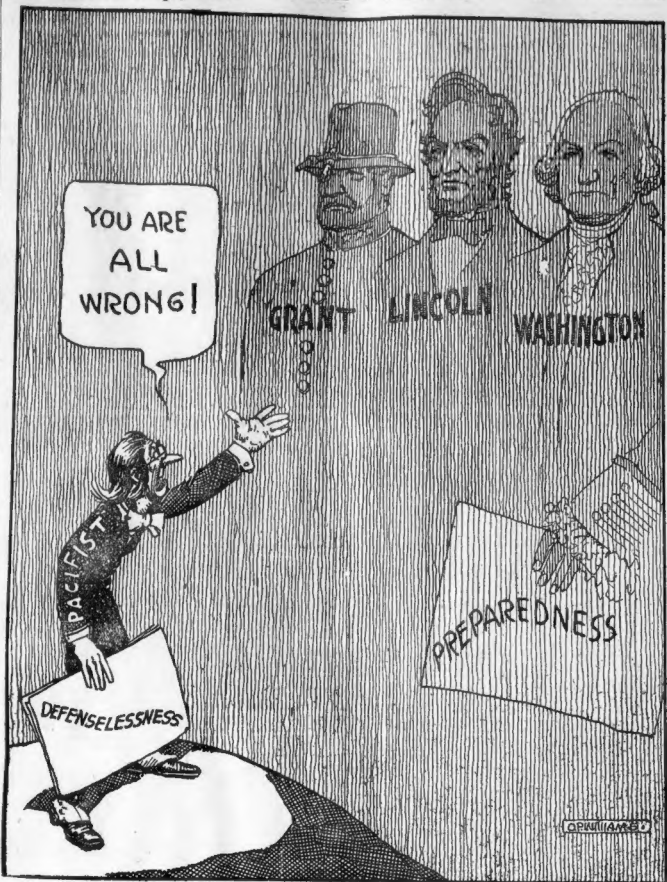

Fannie Hurst, able writer and keen observer, returning from abroad, contrasted French antagonism toward American tourists, and added:

"There should be established a tourist quota law. Keep Americans, with the exception of those traveling strictly on business, at home for a while. Withdraw the American tourist dollar and hear the howl. It would make them realize the value of America in peace as well as in war."

More dollar diplomacy, maybe will say.

Fortunately, He Doesn't Count

By O. P. Williams

NOTWITHSTANDING pacifist opposition, which manifests itself wherever possible, the Citizens' Military Training Camps this year are proving quite the most successful of those yet held. Attendance is large, interest is keen and results are fine.

In view of how certain foreign nations notoriously envy, hate, scorn and insult Americans for being prosperous, now is an especially good time to remember the warnings of Washington, Grant, Lincoln and the other great Americans who have guided us safely in the past.

JOBS DEPENDING ON REAL NEEDS BEST

By DR. FRANK CRANE

A SLIGHT flurry on the New York Stock Exchange caused a drop in stocks.

The grocers and milkmen felt it not at all. But during a week four night-supper clubs went into bankruptcy.

One group catered to the human necessities of society, the other to its follies.

One was solidly grounded, the other rested upon a vacillating, unstable foundation.

This calls attention to the basis upon which a job rests. Occupations which supply human necessities are always on the soundest basis, while those which cater to classes and groups to wealth and luxury, to whims and follies, are most uncertain.

The farmers, carpenters, grocers and butchers found that there was a demand for their services just the same. Their jobs lasted in spite of hard times.

People had to eat and have houses, depression or no depression.

But those who were engaged in entertaining or pleasing—the actors, artists, poets, performers and dealers in the rare, the expensive, and the luxuries of life—were the ones who found their living cut from under their feet.

Don Jacques Rousseau when he wrote "Smile," his famous book on child training, decided to train his imaginary charge in carpentry so his life work would be based on something solid and lasting.

Nations as well as individuals are influenced by the basis upon which their income rests.

One reason given why the financial recovery of Great Britain took place before that of France is that the former has a sounder basis of income.

Her exports are to a greater degree basic necessities—steel, oil, rubber and such materials. France on the other hand is famed for and depends to a greater extent for her income upon the production of luxuries and fashions, upon wine, perfume, silk and similar commodities.

In a world depleted in buying power the national dealing in human necessities always has the firmer basis of prosperity.

SOCIETY INSPIRED BY ATLANTIS

By Garrett P. Serviss

Noted Astronomer and Writer on Scientific Topics of Popular Interest.

It is but a few years ago that the general reader began to make acquaintance with the word "prehistory," applied especially to the early races of man who lived in middle and western Europe during the "old stone" and the "new stone" ages.

That the public began to hear more and more frequently of the "Atlantians," the "Atlantians," the "Atlantians," etc., and of the characteristics of their stone and bone weapons, implements and tools, their customs, together with many facts about the clothing they wore, the domestic life they led and the state of women in those dark times of society.

Readily the prehistorians wandering through those ancient mazes acquired a sense of fun, and lately they have been speaking and writing of their subject with all the confidence that in my school days, very attractive to the imagination, the old story of the sinking of Atlantis, the story of the island of Atlantis, the story of the island of Atlantis.

Mr. Paul Le Cour, speaking for the first time in a public lecture, gave us a new view of the Atlantis of the past, a new Atlantis, a new Atlantis, a new Atlantis.

He said that the Atlantis of the past, a new Atlantis, a new Atlantis, a new Atlantis, was not a Atlantis, a new Atlantis, a new Atlantis.

He said that the Atlantis of the past, a new Atlantis, a new Atlantis, a new Atlantis, was not a Atlantis, a new Atlantis, a new Atlantis.

How Do You Like This One?

A Bathing Suit Fashion Hint for Young Ladies

MISS BINNIE HALE—THIS IS SHE—IS "EASY TO LOOK AT."

How do you like the contents of this bathing suit? It combines many various excellent qualities. It is trim and modest, as things go in our day. It would have shocked the world once upon a time, when ladies, bathing, wore pants. The young lady represents well the modern idea of what a bathing beauty should be, a boyish figure, straight, long legs, narrow hips, little or no weight above the waist, and a YEARNING EXPRESSION.

Abraham Lincoln's mother didn't look like this, or George Washington's mother, either. But perhaps it is all for the best, and anyhow, this is a very nice sort of a bathing suit.

Grease and Goggles

The desire to emulate the glorious feat of Trudie Esler in swimming the English Channel doubtless died aborning in many a feminine natory adder's breast when they cast their eyes on the pictures of Trudie taken before she trudged her wet way from Gris Mes to the chalk cliffs of Dover.

The photographs of Trudie were not handsome. A bar relief of grease and goggles certainly did not enhance the pulchritude of a really pretty girl.

A shudder must have passed over many a timid maid as she realized the stark, nauseating preparations which this brave maid endured to write another epic in the annals of American sport history.

Short-Sighted

A Western railroad is replacing its women clerks with men because the women no sooner learn their jobs than they marry and quit.

But suppose there was no marrying. How long would the railroad business last?

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

STELLA'S friends say her husband is a brute. He says it right out loud without flinching. He says it to her face, and he says it to her back. He says it to her friends, and he says it to her enemies. He says it to the whole world. He says it to the whole world. He says it to the whole world.

He says it to the whole world. He says it to the whole world. He says it to the whole world. He says it to the whole world. He says it to the whole world.

He says it to the whole world. He says it to the whole world. He says it to the whole world. He says it to the whole world. He says it to the whole world.

He says it to the whole world. He says it to the whole world. He says it to the whole world. He says it to the whole world. He says it to the whole world.

He says it to the whole world. He says it to the whole world. He says it to the whole world. He says it to the whole world. He says it to the whole world.

He says it to the whole world. He says it to the whole world. He says it to the whole world. He says it to the whole world. He says it to the whole world.

He says it to the whole world. He says it to the whole world. He says it to the whole world. He says it to the whole world. He says it to the whole world.

He says it to the whole world. He says it to the whole world. He says it to the whole world. He says it to the whole world. He says it to the whole world.

He says it to the whole world. He says it to the whole world. He says it to the whole world. He says it to the whole world. He says it to the whole world.

He says it to the whole world. He says it to the whole world. He says it to the whole world. He says it to the whole world. He says it to the whole world.

He says it to the whole world. He says it to the whole world. He says it to the whole world. He says it to the whole world. He says it to the whole world.
